June 30 is Noynoy Day; it's a holiday

By TJ Burgonio and Christian V. Esguerra

WITH JUNE 30 DECLARED A holiday, expect an overflow crowd to converge on Quirino Grandstand in Manila to witness the popular President-elect Benigno Aquino III being sworn into office.

President Macapagal-Arroyo yesterday issued Proclamation No. 2085 declaring June 30 a special nonworking day nationwide. She said it was "fitting and proper" that all Filipinos be given "full opportunity to witness and welcome this historic event in the life of a nation."

And despite their political differences, Ms Arroyo does not mind sharing a farewell limousine ride with Aquino on the way to his inauguration as the Philippines' 15th President, according to Secretary Ricardo Saludo, her spokesperson.

Aquino himself is getting antsy about the ride, but is not about to back out.

Speaking yesterday at a press conference in his house, the President-elect said: "I understand tradition dictates that this is part of what has to be done.

IN HIS STRONGEST show of support yet for his defeated running mate, President-elect Benigno "Noynoy" Aquino III yesterday declared that Sen. Manuel "Mar" Roxas II was his alter ego in the transition team working to ensure a smooth transition of power on June 30.

Inquirer Rotary's Newspaper of the Year

FOR THE THIRD TIME IN 25 years, the Philippine Daily Inquirer was named the Newspaper of the Year in the Rotary Club of Manila's Journalism Awards held at the Manila Polo Club yesterday.

The award is the 354th prize the Inquirer has won in the past 25 years.

The Rotary Club of Manila cited the Inquirer for "its comprehensive, balanced and fair coverage of various aspects of Philippine life and the pursuit of good governance, free enterprise, social justice and nation-building."

The 91-year-old club bestowed the Newspaper of the Year honors on the Inquirer in 1992 and 2004. It has also given about a dozen individual awards to the Inquirer's reporters, columnists and correspondents since 1987.

In accepting the Newspaper of the Year award on behalf of the Inquirer, publisher Isagani Yambot said, "The Inquirer has performed a watchdog role from its very inception and it will continue performing this role for as long as there is graft and corruption in government and in the private sector."

He served notice on the incoming Aquino administration that the Inquirer would continue performing its watchdog function, praise the administration when it is doing good, criticize it when it is doing bad, and

German hotel exec shot dead in Makati

MURDER AT A STREET CORNER Police investigators stand over the body of German hotel executive Sergio Mazza, who was shot dead at the corner of Dela Rosa and Perea Streets in Makati City on Thursday.

By Miko Morelos

A LONE GUNMAN SHOT DEAD at close range the German-Italian food and beverage executive of the Makati Shangri-La hotel on his way to work at 7 a.m. in the city's business district, police said.

Senior Supt. Froilan Bonifacio, Makati police chief, identified the victim as Sergio Mazza, 38, who sustained at least three gunshot wounds to the head.

The police chief said the victim was single, good-looking and was known to have an active night life. He said investigators were looking into whether Mazza had made any enemies.

Mazza's body was found slumped on the pavement past 7:30 a.m. by a pedestrian who reported the incident to a security guard of a bakeshop at the corner of Dela Rosa and Perea Streets. The watchman, in turn, alerted the police.

The case is under investigation, but Bonifacio said it appeared the motive was a personal grudge.

He ruled out robbery because the victim had his wallet containing ID cards, including a German driver's license, about P20,000 in cash and an expensive Blackberry phone.

"The victim was shot at close range and this could have been done by a professional," Bonifacio told the Inquirer in a phone interview.

THERE ARE TWO BOOKS coming out about President Macapagal-Arroyo, mainly on how she handled the different crises and scored the major accomplishments of her nine-year administration.

But the books, both written by Palace officials and bearing almost exactly the same title, are silent about an issue that could have surely given them bestseller potential.

Both have skipped the "Hello

By Leila B. Salaverria

SHE'S NO LONGER A BILLIONaire, but Las Piñas Rep. Cynthia Villar remains the richest lawmaker in the House of Representatives, much like her husband who is the wealthiest senator in the land.

The four Arroyos in the House are also among the most well-off among their peers since they are included in the top 20 richest among the 270 members of the House, according to the records of their assets, liabilities and net worth they submitted to the chamber. (See partial list on Page A8.)

By contrast, Anakpawis party-list Rep. Rafael Mariano retained the distinction of being the poorest lawmaker.

Villar's net worth as of Dec. 31, 2009, stood at P947.883

Cabral: It's an uphill fight vs smoking

By Jerry E. Esplanada

THE GOVERNMENT is fighting an uphill battle against smoking, according to Health Secretary Esperanza Cabral.

"We face a long and difficult journey in our quest to reduce the evil effects of tobacco use in the country," Cabral said at the launch yesterday of the Department of Health's (DOH) "NoSI," or No to Sigarilyo campaign at the SM Megamall in Mandaluyong.

Noting that more than 17 million Filipinos smoke regularly, Cabral has said the DOH would continue its advocacy against tobacco use.

"The fact that we're up against powerful and well-funded entities and individuals makes the job even harder. But let's not allow these difficulties to blunt our resolve to do the right thing," she said.

She said anti-smoking initiatives, like the "NoSI" campaign, are expected to further boost the intensified program against tobacco use, Cabral said.

The "NoSI" campaign involves the placing of No Smoking stickers on all public utility vehicles throughout the country.

"We would like to protect the public, especially women, from second-hand smoke when they take public utility vehicles on way to terminals," said Irma Asuncion, director of the DOH Center for Health Development-Metro Manila.

Sanctions for violators

Public utility vehicles are required to prominently display the signs inside their units on pain of up to P15,000 in fines and cancellation of their certificates of public convenience, according to Emmanuel Melegrito of the Land Transportation and Franchising Regulatory Board (LTFRB).

The New York City-based Bloomberg Foundation has provided the "NoSI" sticker project a two-year grant of more than P25 million.

The health secretary said that the struggle against tobacco use is not confined to economic, political and legal battles.

"It is ultimately a battle for the hearts and minds of our people. It is a matter of making the evils of tobacco understood by the entire population so that they, too, may rally behind this for the public good and for their own personal welfare," she said.

Adriano Suba-an, DOH-Metro Manila assistant director, said "a personal resolve of saying no to smoking is good."

"But it is not enough. We need to have a collective action to protect all of us from the harmful effects of smoking," said Suba-an.

Recently the DOH issued an administrative order requiring tobacco manufacturers to print graphic picture warnings on the ill effects of smoking on cigarette packs.

Bad for health

Cabral believes the warnings would "convince the smoking public, especially the youth, that smoking is really bad for the health."

Four lung-related diseases—lung cancer, tuberculosis, pneumonia and emphysema—are among the 10 major causes of death in the country, according to the Philippine College of Chest Physicians.

Aside from the LTFRB and SM Megamall, other DOH partners in the "NoSI" campaign include the World Health Organization, Department of Education, Commission on Higher Education, Philippine National Police, Philippine Cancer Society, Coast Guard, National Youth Commission, University of the Philippines, Mandaluyong Pedicab Transport, PCMJ and Health Justice, among others.
